

Anthony Ray, Regional Accreditation Specialist

Anthony Ray joined NACCAS on March 24, 2014 as a Regional Accreditation Specialist for the Accreditation Department. Anthony holds a Master's Degree in Education earned from Shenandoah University in 2010, as well as a bachelor's degree in Forestry and Wildlife Science earned from Virginia Tech in 2007. Anthony is currently a PhD candidate at George Mason University pursuing a degree in Higher Education Administration.

Anthony is new to NACCAS but comes with over 10 years of experience in management, academics, and accreditation; Anthony has served in the roles of Instructor, Academic Coordinator, Accreditation Coordinator, Program Director and Director of Accreditation and has worked directly with his educational institutions to lead efforts to ensure their compliance with COE, ACICS and CEA accreditation standards. Anthony brings a depth of knowledge of accreditation policies and procedures as well as a firm foundation in education. Anthony is also an avid hunter and fisherman, so when he is not in the office he is likely somewhere on the water or in the woods.
